There was once a hard working rabbit named Felix who needed to go from Los Angeles to San Diego for an important meeting. He said to himself, “I will start out early in the morning on my journey so that I can get to San Diego before it’s night.”

So Felix got up the next morning and started to hop along the road going to San Diego which is a great big beautiful city.

He was going for an important meeting with some good friends there so he wanted to get there on time. Felix had planned to be there for a few days so that he could relax by the beach. It would be a long journey for Felix because he had to travel by foot being a rabbit he would have to hop the whole way there. Felix thought it would take him all day to get to his destination.

As Felix hopped down the road next to the beach he looked around and thought he was lucky to live in such a beautiful place. He first passed Anaheim and the beautiful part of Long Beach. After an hour he passed Carlsbad and as he was coming to Escondido two big rats named Judas and his bad little brother Abimelech came out from a big rock where they were hiding.

Each one was carrying a very big knife and a big baseball bat. They demanded that poor Felix give them all of his money, his cell phone, and everything else. Before Felix was even able to reach into his bag Abimelech hit him on the side of the head with his bat. Judas came beside him and started to kick him demanding everything. They went on to take everything even poor Felix's shoes. They thought that they had killed Felix the rabbit so they left him alone there in the middle of the road. He was hurt so bad so it was very hard for Felix to move.

Felix finally managed to crawl to the side of the road where he laid for a few hours before someone came by. First, a rock singing cat named Churchill came by with his band playing very loud music and they almost ran him over because they did not see him.

Felix began to scream as hard as he could but he was hurt very bad so he could not scream loud. The rock singer Churchill and his band could not hear his screams so they did not stop to help him.

A few more hours later it was getting dark and cold and Felix was getting worried that he may die there all alone and that he would never see his friends and family again. Then two business foxes came by.

They saw Felix there and said, “Too bad this area is becoming so dangerous we have to move quick so we do not end up like that too.”
